Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine

Educational Objectives
At the conclusion of this activity, the participant should be better able to:
1 Identify the ethical, legal, and social issues in genomic newborn sequencing, including consent, the retention and secondary use of stored samples, privacy, and the role of state and federal policy.
2 Examine recent data on public and parental interest in genomic newborn screening, along with the concerns, expectations, and conditions that shape that interest.
3 Evaluate strategies for protecting trust and ensuring universality in genomic newborn screening, including access to follow up care, transparency about how samples are used, and community engagement.
