CONTINUING MEDICAL EDUCATION | CID 2717 Anterior Segment Update for the Comprehensive Ophthalmologist

PRESENTED BY:

SPONSORED BY:

OVERVIEW

This program is designed to update comprehensive ophthalmologists on findings and management of anterior segment diseases based on current clinical trials, new class of glaucoma medications, the recently FDA approved iris prosthetic implant, published reports on the impact of cataract surgery on eye pressure in glaucoma patients, clinical recognition of non-glaucomatous optic neuropathies and secondary intra-ocular lens implantation techniques. The program will include glaucoma, cornea, retina, pediatric and neuro-ophthalmology subspecialties.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- Discuss advantages and disadvantages of different imaging modalities
- Incorporate clinical trial findings into clinical practice
- Illustrate clinical indications, outcomes and complications of secondary intraocular lens placement via the posterior segment approach
- Discuss the mechanisms of action, relative efficacy and side effect profiles of various classes of medications
- Explore the role of micro-invasive glaucoma surgery in patients with medically controlled glaucoma needing cataract surgery

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

The intended audience for this activity are comprehensive ophthalmologists and glaucoma specialists.
